New team members.

The Ofsted Big Listen Response.

After the tragic death of head teacher, Ruth Perry in January, 2023, there was call for Ofsted to be overhauled and further looked at to determine whether the model used to inspect educational settings was still fit for purpose. Following the new appointment of Chief Ofsted Inspector, Sir Martyn Oliver, in January, 2024, the Ofsted Big Listen was launched in March, 2024, aiming to give professionals, learners, parents, carers, and the public an opportunity to give their feedback on Ofsted's work.

In September 2024, Ofsted responded to the replies to The Big Listen, setting out the actions it will take to address what it heard. Initially this will only be for schools but changes in further education, early years and the private training provider sectors are to follow.

Currently the following has been stated;

- The Chief Inspector pledges “real change” as Ofsted unveils plans to rebuild trust with all those it inspects and regulates following the ‘Big Listen’.
- Ofsted commits to putting vulnerable children, such as those from disadvantaged backgrounds and those with SEND, at the heart of its reforms.
- New inspection framework to have greater focus on learner outcomes to drive higher standards, alongside a range of measures to reduce teacher stress.
- The overall ‘single word judgement’ will be phased out of Ofsted inspection reports, to be replaced with a report card, as announced by government.

As soon as Ofsted have any further updates, we will let you know via the SCT newsletter.

Learner Spotlight

Kirsty Rothwell, Level 2 Diploma in Care Student

We value the professional relationships we have established with the respected Employers and Employees we work with. Home Instead has been working with us for a number of years and we are always proud to highlight the outcomes of our successful partnership.

"I started my adult learning journey with Clare who is an amazing tutor. She explained everything in a way that I would understand.

At first I wasn't very confident but as I gained the knowledge that was backed in the skills, I found that the standard of my work improved and our service users were very happy.

In reflection I have had some set backs with chronic health conditions that have interuppted my learning but I maintained the standard of work and commitment to my profession as a Care Professional. I am elated with a final grade of a Distinction!"
